

SYREN'S NEW

ELOS N2

BY DEE ORR

The new Syren 12 gauge Elos N2 Sporting is flying off the shelves. Syren is again breaking new ground this time by offering a ladies' gun with a standard adjustable comb, adjustable trigger and interchangeable recoil pads to provide some length adjustment.

I had my chance to spend some time with it when I was at the U.S. Open in New Jersey recently. The gun was light and comes in at only 7lbs 9 oz. They were able to take a considerable amount of weight out of the barrels using their trademarked TRIBORE HP™ 30 inch barrels. When I picked it up I was surprised at how light and easy to handle it was and further amazed at how little recoil I felt when I shot it. It seemed to come up for me very easily when I shot it high mount a few times. So, I lowered to a FITASC stance and still, it came up like it was made for me. I put 50 rounds through it and it shot and moved like a dream.

Further, I felt absolutely no cheek or shoulder tenderness, it was as if I hadn't shot at all.

Needless to say, I was very impressed with this gun.

It's a Syren, so it is also pretty in a classy sort of way. It has clean lines and the action has a black satin finish to reduce glare. It has signature purple accents and an attractive engraving pattern on the receiver. Nice but not too much, attractive but not flashy. It is simply put, an elegant looking gun. The stock is made of Turkish walnut with the enhanced grain and water resistant qualities of Syren's TRIWOOD™ finish. As with all Fabarm produced Syren models, it is backed by a five year warranty, comes in a hard case with fitted interior and five choke tubes.

Finally, this is a great gun at a very reasonable MSRP of $2850. I can hardly wait to get this gun in the hands of some of our Honeybelle Ladies in Florida. ■
